

Postdoctoral Research Scholar (JOB# 12709)

Arizona State University
Psychology Department

The Department of Psychology at Arizona State University invites applications for a Postdoctoral Research Scholar position in the Science of Learning and Educational Technologies (SoLET) Laboratory directed by Danielle McNamara. The postdoctoral research scholar will be working on projects funded by the IES and ONR to explore factors influencing students' performance in reading and writing, in particular source-based essays. The candidate will be involved in conducting studies with high school students and adult literacy students, recruiting and coordinating teachers and schools across multiple sites in AZ, MS, and GA, scoring and analyzing data, publishing outcomes, and directing social media efforts. This is a full-time, benefits-eligible appointment with no tenure implications. Anticipated start date is May 1, 2019.

The qualifications for this position include: must have earned a Ph.D. in learning sciences, educational psychology, or psychology, or in a related field within the past four years. The ideal candidate will have past experience in implementing educational technologies in educational settings and have interest in working in a research lab, particularly one focusing on learning and cognitive sciences.

To apply, please submit (1) a curriculum vitae, (2) statement of research interests, and (3) three letters of reference to PSYPostDocJobs@asu.edu. Inquiries concerning the search should be addressed to the Chair of the Search Committee: Dr. Danielle S. McNamara (dsmcnama@asu.edu). Please mention that you are applying for the Educational Research position. For information on current lab projects, visit: <https://soletlab.asu.edu/>

Initial deadline for receipt of complete applications is February 20, 2019. If not filled, review of complete applications will continue every week thereafter until the search is closed. A background check is required for employment.

Salary range is $48,432 to $51,324.
